NOTABLE VISITOR TO AUSTRALIA.

Professor Mackail's Lectures

By Professor A. T. Strong.

Not since in his history has Australia had the opportunity of welcoming to its shores a scholar of the calibre of Professor J. W. Mackail, one of the foremost figures in modern English literature. His visit, which took place in the summer of 1923, has been the talk of the town, and his lectures, delivered at the University of Adelaide, have been attended by thousands of students and other interested persons.

Professor Mackail, who is a well-known scholar and poet, was born in 1861 in Scotland. He was educated at the University of Edinburgh, and later became a professor at the University of Cambridge. His work has been widely recognized, and he has received many honors, including the Order of Merit.

During his stay in Australia, Professor Mackail delivered a series of lectures on various aspects of English literature, including the works of Shakespeare, the Bronte sisters, and the poetry of Tennyson. His lectures were a great success, and they were eagerly awaited by the public.

Professor Mackail's visit to Australia was an event of considerable importance, and it provided the country with an opportunity to gain a deeper understanding of English literature. His lectures were a fitting tribute to the many contributions that Australian scholars have made to the field of English literature. The University of Adelaide is grateful for the opportunity to have hosted such a distinguished scholar, and we look forward to his future visits to our country.

Minus Dorothy Verne and Claire Batty, of Adelaide, have gained the distinction of being Mr. Mackail's assistants during his lectures.
