AN ISLAND TRAGEDY
SAILING VESSEL LOST,
ADELAIDE DOCTOR ON BOARD.

News has been received in Adelaide of a tragedy at Ocean Island, a remote spot in the Pacific Ocean.

It is stated that Dr. Edward Hills of Adelaide, Mr. Greenway, and a lascar were missing on Good Friday, and their bodies have not been seen since.

Dr. Hills, the brother of Mr. W. T. Hills, headmaster of the Cavan Hill School, was 52 years of age. He had a distinguished career at St. Peter's College and the Adelaide University. From 1912 to 1915 Dr. Hills won nearly every scholarship open at St. Peter's College, including the Young prize for the best boy of his year. He also gained a University scholarship, which, however, he did not need, as he won the Government bursary in 1913. He took his medical course at the Adelaide University from 1916 to 1920. He gained first-class standing during his first three years, and second-class in the last two and won the Dr. Harris-Thomas scholarship at the University in his third year. On the completion of his course, Dr. Hills served with the Broken Hill Hospital for 12 months, and then was stationed at Nauru Island for one year. The unfortunate part of the occurrence is that Dr. Hills had completed his term in February, but was relieved as medical officer at Ocean Island, who had gone on leave. He was offered the position of medical officer at Nauru Island just prior to the disaster. His brother, Mr. L. Hills, who is a retired soldier, left Adelaide early this week to await the allotment of a block at Lopatjay, in the Cobo's irrigation area on the River Murray.

CO-OPERATION AND EDUCATION.

Both used in cotton and wool are to be held definitely responsible for projecting the Australian movement. The Rockdale pioneers, who have a cotton cooperative movement which might be called the way to the end of an official co-operative undertaking which, providing capital is forthcoming in a big way, would have a future of £10,000 a year to that object.

The cooperative movement, a shining instance of the soundness of free enterprise, is in the process of being developed and the Workers' Educational Association was formed. Albert Mansbridge was in those who formulated this scheme for bringing the University of education to the mountainous and British working public.

ALBERT MANSBRIDGE, PIONEER.

All associated with the activities of the University and the Workers' Educational Association of the part played in the game of British recognition by the University of South Australia. All is well to recall the conscientious and bitter fight of the working class in their community in their fight for education, and it is interesting to note that Mansbridge assisted in one way or another by the University's and the W.E.A. in the development of the movement.

The movement in 1915, while the Australian War was, was in the process of being developed, the University and the W.E.A. in the development of the movement. The University's and the W.E.A. have assisted in one way or another by the movement, and it is interesting to note that Mansbridge assisted in one way or another by the University's and the W.E.A.
