THE LATE SIR JOHN GORDON.

The eminent Judge whose death is announced this morning, had attained the allotted span of human existence; but for several years he had fought bravely against painful and debilitating illness, and, in spite of persistent physical weakness, had shown that his brilliant intellectual powers and judicial acumen were unimpaired, and that he was fully capable to discharge the onerous and exacting duties attending occupancy of the Supreme Court Bench. The demise of Sir John Gordon will be sincerely mourned by the legal profession and the general public throughout the Commonwealth, not only for the manner in which for the last 20 years he interpreted and enforced our British laws as the bulwarks of liberty, but on account of his illustrious record as a statesman and publicist, and also his singularly attractive and engaging personal qualities. Endowed with a remarkably alert mind, with discriminative literary tastes and a capacious memory, he was the essence of urbanity and ever generous and kind in his thoughts and dealings with his fellow men. Had he become a Presbyterian Divine, as was contemplated in his schoolgoing days, he would probably have attained to fame as the expounder of a theology too "liberal" for the disciples of Calvin and John Knox; but no one would have found fault with his great-hearted humanitarianism. As a Judge in the Criminal Court, the sentences he pronounced, while marking society's detestation of deeds of barbarity and unscrupulous disregard of human rights, were always tempered with mercy, when there was any sign of the presence of a redeeming trait in the offender's character.

In his career as a Parliamentarian and statesman, Sir John Gordon was a worthy contemporary of such men as the Hons. T. Playford and C. C. Kingston, the Hon. (afterwards Sir Frederick) Holder, Sir John Cockburn and Sir Richard Baker. His election to the Legislative Council in 1888 made a notable difference to the Chamber of Second Thought. Conservatism of an antiquated type had long reigned there supreme; and the bold radicalism of the new member, voiced in graceful and telling English, and illustrated and enforced with witty epigrams and anecdotes, produced a shock from which a few hon. members never seemed to properly recover. As leader for some years in the Council, Sir John was conspicuous for his "silver tongued oratory," and dexterous management of Government business. The cares of Ministerial office, though borne with dignity and a due sense of responsibility, never affected the gaiety of his spirits, and his presence at a Cabinet meeting always added zest and pleasure to the discussions. In the Cockburn and Holder administrations, during tough battles with Opposition forces, Sir John was a doughty warrior, who used with effect—and always fairly and good temperedly—the light weapons of irony and satire, along with the reasonings of logic. For the cause of Federation he laboured earnestly during the 'nineties, and South Australia is especially indebted to him for his championship of her claims in reference to the Murray and Darling Rivers, in reply to the pretensions of the other river States. At the Federal Convention gatherings in 1897 and 1898, Sir John contributed an important share to the particular examination of questions at issue between the States, and the preparation of the great democratic Constitution under which the Commonwealth is governed. In refraining from taking a place in the Federal Parliament, and accepting a seat on the bench of the High Court, Sir John became, in a sense, more of a South Australian than before. On becoming a Judge of the Supreme Court, he intimated that he had, once and for all, put aside political ambitions and partizanships, and that he would devote himself unreservedly to magnifying the judicial office. That pledge he observed most faithfully, and thereby added to the high personal esteem in which he was held by all who had the privilege to know him.

Sport, Solicitor, Councillor

An inner glimpse into the character and personality of Mr. Charles L. Jessop reveals geniality backed by strong mentality. His keen sense of humor is easily aroused, but just as quickly he focuses his attention on the bigger questions, and at once gets to the kernel of the matter. He certainly has the judicial mind, and being well informed on a wide variety of subjects is an interesting conversationalist. Mr. Jessop is a son of the late Mr. L. A. Jessop. He received his early education at Queen's School, North Adelaide, and subsequently went to Geelong Grammar School. Later he returned to Adelaide and studied law at the University of Adelaide. An apt scholar he was even more distinguished in the world of sport.

Football, rowing, and tennis claimed his attention. As stroke, he captained the University crew in the 1904 race in Melbourne. He was secretary of the University Sports Association for a number of years, and is now an honorary life member.

But it was as a footballer in the North Adelaide Club that he came most into prominence. He joined the red-and-whites in 1901, and played for 10 years. He was captain of the team for two seasons. As a snapshot goal kicker he was considered to have few equals. Mr. Jessop is now president and life member of the club.

Mr. Charles L. Jessop

On leaving the University, Mr. Jessop became articled to Mr. A. W. Piper, K.C. He later entered into private practice with Mr. J. G. Duncan-Hughes, and is now in partnership with Mr. H. A. Shierlaw.

For the past three years Mr. Jessop has been a member of the Wakefield District Council, and since June has been its chairman. He is a member of the Metropolitan County Board, and this year was elected president of the North Adelaide district committee of the Liberal Union.

Classification of Prisoners

(By Professor Coleman Phillipson.)

In my article last Saturday I pointed out that if we are to adopt sound rational methods of dealing with prisoners, it is indispensable to classify them. To apply the same treatment to different classes of prisoners, possessing different characters and temperaments, different proclivities, different degrees of criminality, different susceptibilities to temptation, is just as reasonable and just as likely to prove efficacious as to apply the same remedial treatment to patients suffering from different physical maladies.

Scientific Classification

It is at our own peril that we neglect the scientific classification of prisoners and what has recently been termed by progressive criminologists, "individualisation" of treatment. The teachings of biology, sociology, and psychology conclusively show the imperative necessity of modifying the old treatment of violators of the law. These sciences demonstrate more and more emphatically how essential it is to introduce more healthful conditions into prisons, to discriminate the various classes of delinquents from one another and from
