DEATH OF DR. T. BORTHWICK.

A Well-Known Medical Officer.

Dr. T. Borthwick, who recently retired as Medical Officer of health for the City of Adelaide, was unfortunately found to have died in his home at Leura on Tuesday, at the age of 66 years. He held the municipal appointment for 24 years. He was a member of the medical profession for a long time, and had been associated with several prominent medical men.

Dr. Borthwick, who had the degree of M.D. (C.M. & A. E.), was a native of South Australia, which he left when he was 18 years old, and entered the medical profession in England. He was educated at the University of Edinburgh, where he graduated in 1851, and received his M.D. degree in 1853.

Dr. Borthwick was a great lover of books, and his library was considered one of the most important in the City of Adelaide. He was also a noted collector of early books, and his collection was known to be one of the finest in the country.

Dr. Borthwick was a man of great intelligence and culture, and his death will be deeply felt by all who knew him. He is survived by his wife and two children, also by his brother, who is now living in England.

DEATH OF MR. J. T. HACKETT.

Mr. George A. Day, of Malvern, has received a cable message from Mrs. J. T. Hackett stating that her husband died at 11 a.m. on Wednesday morning.

Mr. John Thomas Hackett was a well-known business man in Adelaide, and was deeply respected by all who knew him. He was a member of the Adelaide Stock Exchange, and was one of the leading business men in the city.

Mr. Hackett was a man of great intelligence and energy, and his death will be deeply felt by all who knew him. He is survived by his wife and two children, also by his brother, who is now living in England.