The Lost Books of Livy

A Sortie Comic Story

Professor Darrel Naylor delivered an address to the Academy of Sciences on Friday night on the lost books of Livy. On August 5, 1904, Dr. Naylor was deeply alarmed by the announcement that an Italian Professor, Livy, had discovered the lost books. These books were known to have existed, although they had disappeared for nearly 1,500 years, and were thought to contain valuable information on ancient history.

The Betraying Intention of Purpose

But within a few hours the most unexpected news came to light. Professor Livy Naylor, the other seven works had been recovered by the good offices of Professor A. R. Houseman. The discovery was made during a recent visit to the Roman Excavations in Cambridge, and was confirmed by the expert opinion of the Professor. The works were sent to Livy, who was in the habit of reading them every year, with a smile and a sigh.

A Spy in the Camp

As a result of the discovery, a spy was sent to Livy's place of residence, Dr. Naylor's house. The spy was instructed to keep a strict watch on Livy and his associates, and to report any suspicious activity. The spy was successful in his mission, and soon reported to Dr. Naylor that Livy had been seen with a group of people who were not recognized by Dr. Naylor. Dr. Naylor was alarmed, and immediately took action to prevent any further harm.

The Coronation

At the coronation, Livy was hailed as a hero, and was awarded the highest honors for his discovery. The crowd was enthusiastic, and the cheers and applause lasted for hours. Livy was overcome with emotion, and was tears of joy.

The Clearing

In the end, the story was a happy one. Livy had discovered the lost books, and had saved them from destruction. The world was now able to learn about the ancient history that had been lost for so long. The story of Livy's discovery was one that would be remembered for generations to come.
