The Protocol

From W. A. Hamilton—The greatly anticipated Protocol of great importance to New York and the whole nation is at last on public view. The measure is remarkable for its novelty and novelty, and it has commanded the attention of the press. The Protocol is the work of a committee of three, consisting of Mr. B. D. Bixley, Mr. J. B. Dines, and Mr. H. B. Halsey. The measure is the result of a long and careful study of the subject, and it has been the object of the committee to prepare a measure that shall meet the necessities of the case without infringing upon the rights of the individual.

The Protocol provides for the establishment of a system of economic sanctions against those nations who are engaged in the conflict. It is designed to prevent the flow of goods and services to the enemy, and to compel them to cease their military operations. The Protocol contains provisions for the confiscation of property, for the imposition of tariffs, and for the enforcement of embargoes.

The Protocol is a comprehensive measure, and it is expected to be of great benefit to the nation. It is hoped that it will be successful in bringing about a cessation of hostilities, and in bringing about a just and lasting peace.

The Protocol was signed by the representatives of the nations who were party to the conflict. The signatures were witnessed by foreign dignitaries, and the Protocol was received with enthusiasm by the crowd who had gathered to witness the event.

The Protocol was read by the chairman of the committee, Mr. H. B. Halsey, and it was received with great interest by the audience.

The Protocol is a step in the right direction, and it is expected to be of great benefit to the nation. It is hoped that it will be successful in bringing about a cessation of hostilities, and in bringing about a just and lasting peace.
