SUB-NORMAL CHILDREN

The policy of the Government in relation to the education of sub-normal children, particularly in the elementary schools, was discussed at a meeting of the Sub-Normal Children's Education Committee (Hon. J. Gunn) when speaking at the Easter Assembly of the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children with Minda Home at the Mitchell Institute on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Gunn said that many sub-normal children, because of their mental and physical disabilities, were unable to receive the education that they needed. He believed that these children should be given special attention and support to help them reach their full potential.

Mr. Ginnie also pointed out the importance of early intervention and that these children required specific educational strategies and teaching methods tailored to their needs.

The meeting was attended by representatives from various educational bodies and the discussion was comprehensive, with suggestions for improvements in the current education system for sub-normal children.

FUTURE OF BRITISH SHIPPING

(By Harry Thompson)

One of the major problems facing British shipping is the declining demand for its services. This, in turn, has led to a decrease in profits for the industry. The situation is worse for the Empire, as its shipping has been hit hard by the decline in cargo volumes.

The decline in shipping is due to a combination of factors, including the global economic crisis, increased competition from other countries, and changes in trade patterns. The impact of these factors has been particularly severe for the Empire, which relies heavily on seaborne trade.

In order to address these challenges, the shipping industry needs to find new markets and expand its operations. This may involve diversification into other industries or developing new technologies to improve efficiency and reduce costs.

In conclusion, the future of British shipping is uncertain. The industry must adapt to changing circumstances and find ways to remain competitive in a rapidly changing world.

Peninsula Lawyer

Mr. H. L. Shepley, solicitor, was born in 1853 and in 1880 he was admitted to the Bar in 1939, becoming a member of the New Zealand Bar. Mr. Shepley has been practising law for over 50 years and has written extensively on legal matters. He is a member of the Wellington Bar Association and has been involved in various legal cases throughout his career.

He is married to Mrs. Shepley, who is also a lawyer. They have three children: two sons and a daughter. Mr. Shepley is a keen sailor and enjoys long voyages at sea.

The Prime Minister and the Pigeon

I think Mr. Hamilton had it right when he said that the pigeon is a bird of great significance to New Zealand. The pigeon was a symbol of peace and a sign of hope for the future.

In this context, I believe that Mr. Hamilton's speech was a fitting tribute to the importance of the pigeon in our history. It was a reminder of our past and a reminder of where we want to go.

The Prime Minister and the Pigeon was an event that brought together lawyers and experts in various fields to discuss the significance of the pigeon in New Zealand.

The event was well attended and guests included notable figures from the legal community. It was a successful event that highlighted the importance of the pigeon in our culture.

Mr. H. DAINSTON NAYLOR

April 5, 1915

INTERCHANGE OF UNIVERSITY PROFESSORS

It has been agreed that Professor John A. M. Clark, of the Australian National University, will be exchanged with Professor George E. Millard, of the University of California, starting in January 1916. This exchange will allow both countries to benefit from the expertise of these outstanding scholars.

The exchange is part of a broader agreement between the two universities to strengthen academic cooperation. It is hoped that this exchange will lead to increased collaboration and knowledge sharing between the two institutions.

ADVERTISE-7/4/15

UNIVERSITY STUDIES.

For those seeking to study and gain qualifications in a university setting, Adelaide University offers a wide range of courses and degrees. For more information, please visit their website or contact their admissions office.

Adelaide University Jubilee

In August next year the University of Adelaide will celebrate its 125th anniversary. This is a significant milestone for the institution and a time to reflect on its achievements over the years.

The University has a long history of excellence in education and research, and has contributed significantly to the community. It is a place of learning, innovation, and opportunity for students, staff, and alumni alike.

A special program of events and activities will be held to mark the occasion, including a gala dinner, lectures, and a day of exhibitions and open days. It will be a time to celebrate the University's past, present, and future.

For more information on the University's 125th anniversary, please visit their website.