Greeks and Armenians: Their Awful Sufferings.

By Professor H. Darney Naylor

I have often pondered a question which has been buried in my mind for many long years. It is one of those questions which, if left unanswered, seems to overshadow the human heart. It is a question that cannot be ignored. The question is: Why do we suffer? And, more specifically, why do the Greeks and Armenians suffer so much? This question has been haunting me for many years, and I feel that it is time to address it.

The Greeks and Armenians have endured untold sufferings, both physical and emotional. They have been subjected to countless acts of violence, discrimination, and oppression. It is not an easy task to understand why this suffering continues.

The suffering of the Greeks and Armenians is not limited to their physical well-being. It is also reflected in their mental and emotional state. They are trapped in a state of constant fear, anxiety, and hopelessness. They live in a world where they are constantly reminded of their past suffering, and the fear of the future.

The Greeks and Armenians have a strong sense of identity and culture, which is severely threatened by their current situation. They have a rich history and a unique identity that is being eroded by the forces of oppression.

The suffering of the Greeks and Armenians is not limited to their own community. It also affects the entire world. It is a problem that requires global attention and action. We cannot ignore the suffering of the Greeks and Armenians, and we must do everything in our power to help them.

In conclusion, the suffering of the Greeks and Armenians is a problem that demands our attention and action. We must work towards understanding the root causes of their suffering and find ways to alleviate their pain. We must also remember that their struggle is not in vain, and that their suffering serves as a reminder to all of us of the importance of justice, compassion, and equality.

---

Important Appointments.

At a meeting of the council of the University of Adelaide on Friday, several important appointments were made.

The New Law Professor.

The appointment of a successor to Professor William Philip to fill the vacant chair of law was made. Mr. A. L. Campbell, of Sydney, a senior barrister, and a prominent member of the University, was appointed to the chair of law. He is a well-known lawyer, and has made a name for himself in his field.

The appointment of a successor to Professor Charles Mitchell to fill the vacant chair of chemistry was also made. Mr. J. E. B. Thomson, of Melbourne, was appointed to the chair of chemistry. He is a well-known chemist, and has made a name for himself in his field.

---

Rhodes Scholarship.

The Rhodes Scholarship is a prestigious award that is given to the most outstanding students in the world. It is a testament to the excellence of the students who receive it. The scholarship is named after the British statesman, Henry John Apache, who founded it.

The scholarship is given to students who have achieved outstanding academic success and who have demonstrated exceptional leadership qualities. It is a significant honor, and it is a testament to the students who receive it.

I am proud to announce that we have a student who has been selected for the Rhodes Scholarship. This is a result of hard work and dedication, and it is a testament to the student's ability to succeed in his chosen field.

---

A Professor Appointed.

The Council of the University of Adelaide has appointed Mr. A. L. Campbell, of Sydney, to fill the vacant chair of law at the University. Mr. Campbell is a leading member of the Bar in New South Wales, and is a prominent figure in the legal profession.

Mr. Campbell has been a member of the Bar for many years, and has served as a judge in the Supreme Court of New South Wales. He is well-known for his expertise in the field of law, and his appointment is a testament to his dedication and commitment to the legal profession.

I am confident that Mr. Campbell will make a valuable contribution to the University, and I am looking forward to working with him in the future.