LATE SIR JOHN SALMOND.

Appreciations from Bench and Bar.

The news of the death of Sir John Salmon, of the New Zealand Supreme Court Bench, and previously Dean of the Faculty of Law at the Adelaide University, was received with deep regret in Adelaide, where so many of the members of the legal profession received their early training under his direction.

Sir John was connected with the Adelaide University from 1897 until 1905, during which period he was Professor of Law at the University. He was one of the most respected members of the legal profession, and in 1910 was appointed Dean of the Faculty of Law.

The late Sir John was a man of great ability, and his contributions to the legal profession will be long remembered. He was a man of great kindness and consideration, and was always willing to help those who sought his advice.

Reference in Court.

The late judge was a man of great ability, and his contributions to the legal profession will be long remembered. He was a man of great kindness and consideration, and was always willing to help those who sought his advice.

THE LATE SIR JOHN SALMOND, by the death of such a distinguished jurist. The late Judge was one of the greatest jurists of modern times. Many of the profession had the advantage of being trained by him at the Adelaide University, and to those men his memory will always be held in high esteem.

Mr. E. F. Claxton, K.C., on behalf of the Bench, endorsed His Honor's remarks, and said that the profession who had studied law under Sir John were in a very great loss. His Honor had been a great friend to the profession, and his advice had been sought by many of them.

Mr. H. W. Bennett, who was appearing in the case occupying His Honor's attention, said that he was the Storekeeper in 1866, the year prior to Sir John's resignation from the Adelaide University, and thought he had been very fortunate in having such a distinguished jurist as his colleague in the Bench. His Honor had been a great friend to the profession and to the community, and his advice had been sought by many of them.

Mr. W. Bennett, who was appearing in the case occupying His Honor's attention, said that he was the Storekeeper in 1866, the year prior to Sir John's resignation from the Adelaide University, and thought he had been very fortunate in having such a distinguished jurist as his colleague in the Bench. His Honor had been a great friend to the profession and to the community, and his advice had been sought by many of them.

In the case occupying His Honor's attention, there was no one present who could do justice to the late Sir John Salmon, the late jurist who had been so long associated with the Bench, and who had been such a great friend to the profession and to the community.

Sir John was a man of great ability, and his contributions to the legal profession will be long remembered. He was a man of great kindness and consideration, and was always willing to help those who sought his advice.

The late Sir John was a man of great ability, and his contributions to the legal profession will be long remembered. He was a man of great kindness and consideration, and was always willing to help those who sought his advice.

The late Sir John was a man of great ability, and his contributions to the legal profession will be long remembered. He was a man of great kindness and consideration, and was always willing to help those who sought his advice.