MUSICAL EDUCATION

CONFERENCE OF TEACHERS

A conference of music teachers will be held at the Inter-City Hotel on Monday. A list of the teachers who will attend the conference, with the subject of each paper to be presented, has been released. The conference is being organized by the State Education Department and will cover a variety of topics, including the latest developments in music education and the role of technology in teaching music. The keynote speaker for the conference will be Professor E. Harold Davies, a renowned musicologist and educator.

Professor E. Harold Davies
Elder Professor of Music, who today will address the conference on "The Future of Music Education." Davies has been a leading figure in the field of music education for many years and has published extensively on the subject.

LEARNING TO HEAR

"Poor performances which are now associated with the echo of ignorant voices would no longer be tolerated. While the poor composition and poor performances which are still being produced by the 'waste-paper basket' of the nation's education, are an insult to the ears of the nation's children, they are also an insult to the ears of the nation's future." The buying of instruments and the teaching of music must match the words and the deeds of all classes of the nation.

TEACHERS OF MUSIC

"The training of the teacher of music is the key to the success of the school music program. The teacher must be able to inspire the love of music in the student, and must also be able to communicate the technical aspects of music to the student. The teacher must also be able to encourage the student to explore the possibilities of music, to use music as a means of self-expression." The training of the teacher of music should include a study of the history of music, a study of the technical aspects of music, and a study of the psychology of music.
