DEATH OF PROFESSOR KELLY.

Mr. David Frederick Kelly, M.A., Hughes Professor of Classics and Compositions, Philology and Literature, died at the North Adelaide Private Hospital at 11 o'clock on Monday night. Mr. Kelly, who has not been in really good health for some years, returned to the colony a short time ago from England, and was taken straight to the North Adelaide Private Hospital, where he remained up to the time of his demise. Mr. Kelly, who was a brilliant scholar, a trained foundation scholar at Trinity College, Dublin, about 1865, and also secured a gold medal for Greek and Latin, of which languages he had a profound knowledge, from Trinity College, where he obtained his B.A. degree, went to Cambridge, and took the M.A., at Cambridge his career was distinguished one, and he went through the ordeal of examinations eighth in classics in Cambridge Tripos. For some years afterwards he acquired the position of headmaster of the Ely School, which he resigned last in 1878 in order to come to South Australia, Mr. Kelly is the son-in-law of Professor Davidson. He arrived in the colony in February, 1879.

Professor Kelly, who was born in 1847 in the county of Limerick, Ireland, for England, to his wife (a sister of Mr. J. H. D'Almaine, of that city) and four children, and Mrs. Kelly will leave England for Adelaide. Mr. Kelly was much devoted to his university career, and he has been the best models for many of his connections. He was an energetic man, and during the course of his studies at Cambridge he was one of the "handful" for the annual match with Oxford. Upon reaching Adelaide he was interested in the pastime, and the University Club was warmly supported by him. As a result, he was asked to help in the field, and for some time he was the leader of the University Club which used to hold meetings on the grounds. The funeral will take place at 1 o'clock this afternoon from the Private Hospital, and the remains will be interred in the North Road Cemetery.

Inhabiting students are reminded that they should not delay entering their names for the French and German classes at the University of Adelaide. Mr. E. G. Hind will give the terms of his evening classes on Thursday, March 29, at 2 p.m. The schedule will commence on Monday, April 3, and Members of the University Club will meet in French on Wednesday, March 28, at 1 p.m. The date for French evening classes is Friday, shortly before the holidays.

Seventeen entries have been received for the examination for the Edith Scholarships at the University of Adelaide.
