On Friday morning a large and influential delegation waited on the Minister of Education to bring under his notice matters connected with the University scholarships.

T. Callaghan, the University graduate who introduced the deputation, said they were representing the council and senate of the University and other schools interested in the matter. They were not inviting the Government to add any new scholarships but they did want some more. They represented that the University had not received any increase in the last 10 years, and that the cost of living had increased by 25 per cent. They said that the University scholarships had existed for 10 years, and that the amount of $50 was too small. They said that the scholarships should be increased to $100. They said that the scholarships should be given to clever students, and not to those who were simply good at the exams. They said that the scholarships should be given to students who were not only good at the exams but who were also good at other things.

Mr. F. Chaplin, the advocate for the University, said that he was not advocating any new scholarships, but he was advocating an increase in the existing scholarships. He said that the scholarships should be increased to $100. He said that the scholarships should be given to clever students, and not to those who were simply good at the exams. He said that the scholarships should be given to students who were not only good at the exams but who were also good at other things.

MR. J. E. JACOBS.

The Register 15th July 1993

UNIVERSITY SCHOLARSHIPS

On Friday morning a large and influential delegation waited on the Minister of Education to bring under his notice matters connected with the University scholarships.

T. Callaghan, the University graduate who introduced the deputation, said they were representing the council and senate of the University and other schools interested in the matter. They were not inviting the Government to add any new scholarships but they did want some more. They represented that the University had not received any increase in the last 10 years, and that the cost of living had increased by 25 per cent. They said that the University scholarships had existed for 10 years, and that the amount of $50 was too small. They said that the scholarships should be increased to $100. They said that the scholarships should be given to clever students, and not to those who were simply good at the exams. They said that the scholarships should be given to students who were not only good at the exams but who were also good at other things.

Mr. F. Chaplin, the advocate for the University, said that he was not advocating any new scholarships, but he was advocating an increase in the existing scholarships. He said that the scholarships should be increased to $100. He said that the scholarships should be given to clever students, and not to those who were simply good at the exams. He said that the scholarships should be given to students who were not only good at the exams but who were also good at other things.