ENGINEERING SCIENCE

Adelaide Offers Advantages

NEW £40,000 BUILDING

South Australia is keeping abreast of the times in the matter of providing facilities for the study of engineering.

Means of demonstration most modern and complete are available in the new building nearing completion at the rear of the Adelaide University.

Built for the University by the Government at a cost in the vicinity of £40,000, the new building is a fine specimen of modern architecture.

In close proximity to Darling Buildings and built on similar architecture, the building is a fine specimen of modern architecture.

Standing a great distance back from the city, the building is a fine specimen of modern architecture.

Both the physics and engineering sections will probably begin operations early in the new year.

PROUD OF STUDENTS
Professor Chapman has been associated with the Adelaide University for 24 years.

During the years that have elapsed many brilliant scholars have studied under his direction.

Professor Chapman is proud of their achievements. He is satisfied that the results attained by graduates at Adelaide compare favorably with any other university in the Commonwealth.

To those who were handicapped by the lack of funds to enable them to complete their course within the usual period of four years, South Australia, he said, offered advantages superior to those of any other Commonwealth university.

In the other universities a student was compelled to study a certain number of hours each week, but in this country he could take as long as he liked in completing the course.

Workers are busily engaged transferring the machinery and fitting position. Although not so extensive as the plants at the Melbourne, Sydney, and Brisbane Universities, Professor Chapman says that the South Australian collection will compare favorably with them in instructional purposes.

TESTS CONDUCTED
It was surprising, he explained, the number of tests which had been conducted. The university had been approached to test the strength of steel, iron, wood, concrete, and other materials.

Located in another large room foundations had been prepared for electric pumps and water motors. The latter were necessary for demonstrating the principles of water pressure.

At the University water would be pumped into a tank and controlled by valves, enabling the water pressure to be exerted to the water passages through the motors.

Placed away in a quiet corner awaiting installation in the new quarters are several electric motors reclaimed from the fluffly Australia.

Australia. Your personal contact with the great judges of England, whose judgments you are so often called upon to interpret and expound, will be of great service in the important duties entrusted to you.

To have been the guest of honor of the judges of the Privy Council and of the chancellors of the great universities, including your own University of Cambridge; to have witnessed the great Dominion exhibition and the famous fiasco at Wembley; to have been hospitably entertained in the great capitals of the old world, and to have received a special welcome from the former vice-regal representatives of this State, were honors not only to yourself, but to the State of South Australia.

"During the Great War," continued Mr. Denny, "you displayed the keenest interest in the welfare of the Australian troops, many of whom, including myself, were glad to receive your messages of regard and sympathy. It was fitting, therefore, that you should have visited the battlefields of France, where so many of your fellow-countrymen won an imperishable name for Australia, and so many paid the supreme penalty."

"During your absence the Government was fortunate in being able to have the services of His Honor Mr. Justice Poole as Acting Chief Justice, and Dr. F. W. rendered most faithful and loyal service. In again assuming your judicial duties we extend to you every good wish."

The Chief Justice said he was most grateful to the members of the Bar for having attended the court to offer him a welcome back after his holiday. He could assure them it gave him great pleasure to be back among them. He had had an interesting and enjoyable time since he left Adelaide for his holiday. He spent most of that time in Great Britain. The old country was just as beautiful and just as interesting as ever. The Attorney-General was right in saying that he had learned a good deal there. At the same time, he had learned a lesson for Australia by removing some illusions.

W.E.A. SUMMER SCHOOL

THE CLOSING SESSIONS

The summer school just concluded at Holiday House, during the auspices of the Workers' Educational Association, has proved a great success.

Addressed the students, for the first time in his official capacity as director of the Association. After having outlined the objects of the movement, the director spoke of the great pleasure it had afforded him to be present at the closing session.

He was generally so happy at home with a book, but the week's experience had been most interesting, where all had common interests, and were anxious to help each other.

State Will Benefit from Trip

TRIBUTES BY BAR

The visit of Sir George Murray (Chief Justice of South Australia) to Great Britain would be of great benefit to the State, said the Hon. W. J. Denny (Attorney-General) today.

In the presence of a large gathering of members of the Bar at the Civil Court this morning he welcomed Sir George on his resumption of duty after his holiday abroad.

At the Bar table were the Hon. P. McMahon Glynn, K.C., Messrs. F. V. Smith, K.C., A. W. Piper, K.C., and T. S. O'Halloran, K.C. Officers of the courts were also present.

The Attorney-General said:—"It gives me much pleasure on behalf of the Bar of South Australia to extend to you a hearty welcome home, and at the same time to express our loyalty and confidence on the occasion of your resumption of duty. On the eve of your departure nearly 12 months ago we expressed the hope that you would not only feel the physical advantage of a temporary cessation of your labors, but that your visit would be one of ripe interest and experience. Those good wishes have been fulfilled."

SIR GEORGE MURRAY who has resumed duty after 10 months' holiday.

He had impressed upon many people that the Australian people were composed almost entirely of migrants from the British Isles and their descendants.

Chief Justice, "that ever-day was practicing a little plebeian upon me when he asked me if we go on circuit in Australia. I said, 'We do.' He said, 'If you go to the States, you will go by train.' 'Dear me, you will go in Australia would be like asies as the land in the middle ages, was Lord Darling's response. (Laughter) took the opportunity of telling him," continued Sir George, "that justice is administered in Australia in the same way as it is in Great Britain."

Sir George said that he spent a month in France, and visited the scenes made famous by the Australians during the war. He did not think they ever fully realized the Australians did during the war achievements. (Laughter) where one of their brethren of the Bar, where "inquired himself so greatly."

"I had a guide," the Chief Justice said, "but I do not know if he was full of the wonderful fighting spirit of the Australians. I could go on doing myself in that way."
