GOOD CITIZENSHIP.

The Aim of Educationists.

"The outstanding characteristic of the work of the school teacher to-day is the recognition of the practical and intellectual value of the child," said the Director of Education at the conference of the Education Society last night.

The opening session of the third conference of the Education Society of South Australia, held in the North-Eastern, was last night. There was a large attendance of educationalists from the various parts of the State.

The president, Professor J. McKeith, and the chairman, Mr. H. E. H. Morgan, welcomed the members of the society to the meeting. The president said that the meeting was to be held under the title of "Education in a Liberal Education." That night they were to begin the discussion on "Education and the Child" and "Education and the School Community." The aim of education was to bring the child closer to the realities of everyday life.

Moral, Physical, and Intellectual.

The Director of Education (Mr. W. T. Brown) said that the aim of education was to bring the child closer to the realities of everyday life. The major part of the discussion was devoted to the process of education. Education should not be limited to the classroom. It was important to train the child's body and mind. Education was not only about learning, but also about developing the child's moral and intellectual capacities.

Dr. G. H. Davidson (Director of the Elder Conservatorium), the Conservatorium String Quartet (Messrs. Charles Schlabbay, Harry M. Milligan, G. R. Whitington and Kathleen Meegan), and Miss Maude Pidd, Mrs. Ben, let a proper regard for ethical values.

"The aim of education must be to bring the child closer to the realities of everyday life. It is important to train the child's body and mind. Now is the time to think about the process of education." - Dr. G. H. Davidson, Director of the Elder Conservatorium.
