By Chas. R. Hodge.

To those who know the Victor Harbour region, the name of Port Elliott is familiar. It is the home of the famous old whaling station and of the beautiful old whaling schooners. The town is situated on a fine site, with a magnificent view of the ocean, and it is well known for its fine scenery and climate. The population of Port Elliott is about 3,000, and it is the center of a large agricultural district.

The Progress of Victor Harbour.

The town is in a state of rapid growth, and many new buildings are being erected. A large hotel, a new school, and a hospital are among the new structures. The town is also well provided with public parks and recreation grounds. The government is making a large investment in the development of the town, and it is expected that it will soon become a leading resort for summer visitors.

Education Conference.

Training for Citizenship.

Ideals of the Department.

The third conference of the Education Society was held at the Victor Harbour Hotel. The conference was attended by representatives from all parts of the state, and it was a great success. The President, Mr. J. McKay, address the gathering and spoke on the importance of education for citizenship.

The President said that in the first of the series of conferences they had dealt with the problems of the curriculum, and in this second, with the basis of a liberal education, and their present deliberations were directed towards the realization and application of citizenship. The society existed in order that it might do good by influencing the work of the public schools. They wished to unite the benefits of public education in order to work for the development of the community. The future belonged to the people who would use the advantages of citizenship. The people of the state were expected to do their duty as citizens.

The Department's Ideals.

The Director of Education, Mr. J. McKay, said the department was the expression of the standpoint of a commercial and industrial people. It did not speak for the characteristics of an ideal citizen. It was the embodiment of the will of the people, of the majority of the people. The task of the department was to prepare the minds of the people for the future, to make the community which they would be a part of. The department was not confined to the public schools, but it was concerned with the civic and social life of the community. The department was concerned with the education of the whole people, not just the youth.

Leaving School.

The Lord Mayor (Mr. Wallace Bruce) said that the education system should be based on the idea that each child should have the opportunity to learn what they needed for life. The education system should be flexible and adaptable to the needs of the individual child. The department should be concerned with the development of the whole person, not just the academic abilities.

Mr. J. McKay, the Director of Education, said that the department was concerned with the development of the whole person, not just the academic abilities. It was concerned with the development of the individual, not just the group.

Learning to Troubles.

The Teachers' College supplies them with all the resources they require with adequate knowledge and scientific methods. It is concerned with the development of healthy habits, with the training of leaders, and with the development of a community of leaders who will inspire others. It is concerned with the development of citizenship, and with the development of leaders who will inspire others to follow in their footsteps.

A Worthy Exemplary.

In conclusion, Mr. McKay, the education authority of the state, said that the department was concerned with the development of the individual, not just the group. It was concerned with the development of the whole person, not just the academic abilities. It was concerned with the development of citizenship, and with the development of leaders who will inspire others to follow in their footsteps.
