GRADUATES IN BUSINESS.
Employers' Encouragement.

The fact that university women have limited opportunities for meaningful professional careers and have had to work in fields of service for employment tends to be acknowledged. Women's recognition by graduates is not really of the same kind as the recognition of men. The opportunity is recognized by graduates not only as a matter of personal interest, but as a matter of public concern. The concern is clearly and properly expressed in a report of the Select Committee on the University of Victoria, which says: "The committee found that there is a growing appreciation of the need for university women to be provided with opportunities for professional careers. The committee also found that there is a widespread recognition of the importance of women's contributions to society, and that women's participation in professional careers is essential to the development of a more equitable and just society."