FUTURE OF THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH.

Some Pertinent Issues.

1-By A. L. Gordon MacKay

Since we are approaching the meetings of the Imperial Conference and of the Commonwealth Prime Ministers, it is desirable that we should inform our minds of the issues which are soon to be faced by the responsible statesmen. What is the position of the Dominions within the British Commonwealth? What is the position of the Treaties of Versailles and of Locarno? Have we made it clear to the Allies that we wish to find a way out of the central European problem? What are the interests of the Dominions placed as the result of Mr. Chamberlain's decision to sign a treaty which is to be of great advantage to the Dominions, not only in the case of Canada, Australia, and South Africa, but in the case of New Zealand and the South Pacific?

Under the Treaty of Versailles as I understand the position, Lord George, virtually gave the Dominions a voice in the foreign policy of the Empire and the British Commonwealth. Under the Treaty of Locarno, Mr. Chamberlain declared that a country in which the Dominions have a voice in the foreign policy of the Commonwealth of Nations will be in a position to determine the Commonwealth of Nations. This means, that whereas in the case of a country in which the Dominions have a voice in the foreign policy of the Commonwealth of Nations, the Dominions may go to war in support of its obligations to the British Commonwealth, the British Commonwealth has no way of knowing whether the Dominions have a voice in the foreign policy of the Commonwealth of Nations. However, the Dominions may go to war in support of its obligations to the British Commonwealth, but the British Commonwealth has no way of knowing whether the Dominions have a voice in the foreign policy of the Commonwealth of Nations.

Important Treaties and their Consequences.

This state of affairs might only be avoided by some arrangement by which the Prime Ministers of the Dominions might be represented at the Imperial Conference. This could be done by the appointment of an Imperial Conference for the Dominions, on the lines of the Imperial Conference for the Dominions. This would enable the Dominions to have a voice in the foreign policy of the Commonwealth of Nations. It is therefore very desirable that the Dominions should have a voice in the foreign policy of the Commonwealth of Nations.

I propose in future articles to make application of the principles outlined in this article to the current issues of the Imperial Conference, and to encourage the Dominions to represent their interests at the Imperial Conference. This would enable the Dominions to have a voice in the foreign policy of the Commonwealth of Nations. It is therefore very desirable that the Dominions should have a voice in the foreign policy of the Commonwealth of Nations.

The questions raised in this article are not new, but they are of great importance to the Dominions, and I therefore believe that they should be given serious consideration by both the Dominions and the British Commonwealth. The time has come for the Dominions to assert their rights and interests within the British Commonwealth, and to demand a voice in its foreign policy.

The text of the Treaties of Versailles and Locarno is a valuable source of information. It is therefore desirable that the Dominions should have a voice in the foreign policy of the Commonwealth of Nations.

The questions raised in this article are not new, but they are of great importance to the Dominions, and I therefore believe that they should be given serious consideration by both the Dominions and the British Commonwealth. The time has come for the Dominions to assert their rights and interests within the British Commonwealth, and to demand a voice in its foreign policy.

The text of the Treaties of Versailles and Locarno is a valuable source of information. It is therefore desirable that the Dominions should have a voice in the foreign policy of the Commonwealth of Nations.

The questions raised in this article are not new, but they are of great importance to the Dominions, and I therefore believe that they should be given serious consideration by both the Dominions and the British Commonwealth. The time has come for the Dominions to assert their rights and interests within the British Commonwealth, and to demand a voice in its foreign policy.

The text of the Treaties of Versailles and Locarno is a valuable source of information. It is therefore desirable that the Dominions should have a voice in the foreign policy of the Commonwealth of Nations.

The questions raised in this article are not new, but they are of great importance to the Dominions, and I therefore believe that they should be given serious consideration by both the Dominions and the British Commonwealth. The time has come for the Dominions to assert their rights and interests within the British Commonwealth, and to demand a voice in its foreign policy.

The text of the Treaties of Versailles and Locarno is a valuable source of information. It is therefore desirable that the Dominions should have a voice in the foreign policy of the Commonwealth of Nations.

The questions raised in this article are not new, but they are of great importance to the Dominions, and I therefore believe that they should be given serious consideration by both the Dominions and the British Commonwealth. The time has come for the Dominions to assert their rights and interests within the British Commonwealth, and to demand a voice in its foreign policy.

The text of the Treaties of Versailles and Locarno is a valuable source of information. It is therefore desirable that the Dominions should have a voice in the foreign policy of the Commonwealth of Nations.