Students' Concert

Conservatorium Concert

PROMISING ARTISTS

There was a fair attendance at the Conservatorium concert given in the hall on Wednesday afternoon. The programme was submitted for the approval of the students by the students' committee, and a large number of the young performers were taking their first public appearance.

The first of these, Miss Ada Barber, has long been considered one of the promising artists of the school, and her performance did not disappoint the expectations. She was followed by Miss Ada Wilson, who gave a fine performance, in which her voice was in perfect condition. Miss Ada Wilson's voice is a sweet, clear soprano, and she has a good technique and a natural sense of phrasing.

Another singer who made a good impression was Miss Ada Adolph, who gave a fine performance of a Schumann song. Her voice was clear and well controlled, and her phrasing was excellent.

The programme ended with a fine performance by Miss Ada Watson, who sang a Schubert song. Her voice was warm and expressive, and she handled the difficult passage with ease.

In conclusion, the concert was a success, and the students were pleased with the work of the performers.

UNIVERSITY DEBATE.

Visitors' Second Victory.

Interesting Racing Discussion.

A large and enthusiastic audience attended the second of three debates between the University and the Town Council, which were held on Wednesday night. The debate on the motion discussed was "The safety of horse racing," and the visitors' side was represented by Mr. G. O. Bridgeman and Mr. R. P. Kerr.

The debate was well conducted, and both sides made strong points. The visitors' side was particularly strong on the question of the safety of horse racing, and Mr. G. O. Bridgeman spoke with great conviction on the subject.

On the other hand, the town council's side was represented by Mr. R. P. Kerr. He made a strong case for the regulation of horse racing, and his arguments were well received by the audience.

The debate ended with a vote of thanks to both speakers, and the audience was left with a strong impression of the importance of the subject.
