

18th. September 1950.

My dear Ancombe,

Thanks for sending back the review so promptly and for deleting the sentence to which I drew attention. I feel very sure that it would have been misunderstood as implying that either you or the authors or, more probably, both had asserted inferred that there had been no fall in intelligence. As none of these things is true, I am glad to see it out.

Thank you very much for your trouble.

Yours sincerely,