

7th. October 1949.

Dear Anscombe,

I am sending you a copy of this book on the Trend of Scottish Intelligence, which you might care to review for Her Majesty, or indeed, for a number of other journals which will need them. Anyway, it would seem that the job should be done by a statistician, or the important thing is that the limitations of the surveys and enquiries that have been made so far should be fully understood.

If you do not want to do it, perhaps someone else in the department would like to.

Yours sincerely,
