

9 February 1931.

Professor Bhai Balmukand,
Agricultural College.
Lyallpur,
Punjab, India.

Dear Balmukand,

I am glad to hear that you are getting into touch with Keen, as I think it likely that he will be making an appointment which might possibly suit you.

I must congratulate you most heartily on your success in launching the enquiry into the relation between fertility and affluence in the Punjab villages. Substantial data on these two variates, both of which as I now realise are difficult to measure will from all points of view be of very great importance, and I am particularly glad that you have the credit of taking the initiative in a matter which should certainly attract increasing attention.

Yours very sincerely,