My dear Balmukand,

I am so sorry to hear that it was ill health that prevented you attending the Statistical Conference recently at Delhi. It was a fairly representative gathering of world statisticians and Mahalanobis, working for the Indian Statistical Institute had done a great deal to make the meeting a success.

I did not know that you had retired to Delhi. Somehow I got the impression that you were living in Bombay. For myself, I flew straight home from Calcutta at the end of the month. Sorry to have missed you.

Yours sincerely,
