Dear Fisher,

I enclose Yates' certificate which I am delighted to sign.

We all feel very strongly here that the Genetical Society ought to control and sponsor a journal, comprehensive, efficient and designed to meet the needs of the whole Society. If the Press is willing to cooperate, I think we ought therefore to go ahead at once. It is now the strategic moment to capture the position held by the Germans in the whole field. Such a journal could take foreign papers while giving priority where necessary to our own work. I wonder what view the Press takes about Punnett and the present journal. If the Society were to publish a journal it would kill the present journal. Would Punnell surrender or would he fight to the last page? I take it the press would have something to say there. Possibly a place on the editorial board would soften the blow of retirement.

Yours sincerely,
