My dear Fisher,

Hereewith the chapter which you kindly said you would read for me. What I hope you will kindly do is to see if there are any statistical blunders in it. If you have anything to say, perhaps you will put it in the margin and then refer it any observations you have to make. Of course I should also be glad when any severe remarks you feel disposed to make.

I feel rather disappointed with the production because I set out with high hopes that I should be able to lay down some general laws about progressive. As it is it is all Latin. Wayne, last...

Yours sincerely,

L. Darwin
