My dear Fisher,

I think yours is an interesting suggestion about triplets. My doubt is whether the numbers are as great as you suggest; for I suppose people have to apply, and many might fail to do so. What next? Possibly any midwife might know to whom to apply, which could tell one where to begin operations.

I could inquire from a Sir F. Churghamay, who would be likely to know. My only other doubt is whether we could now start—the game even if we knew how. One does not want to bother people quite useless. I hope we shall meet on the 25th last, and can talk.

I was writing to R. Fisher, the Chairman of the American Eugenic Committee (I forget what they call it) the other day, and spoke to him about twins. He had said, I think, that they should try to get the mental tests into all elementary schools. I said to my aunts when there is a school with twins and also with old twins, they should measure them both physically. and mentality, and that as a comparison between the conceptions between twins and stillborn twins ought to give an indication of the value of the mental tests as an index of inborn qualities. If they do more in that direction that surgery might be extended.

Yours sincerely,

D. Darwin

Badly improved!
