Dear Huskins,

Thanks for your letter. I am glad to get your reaction to the Annals. With luck I hope to keep the journal going much as before, though I am afraid the paper will soon deteriorate, even if the papers do not.

My Department has so far weathered all the attempts of the College to snuff it out; and we are doing a bit for the Blood Transfusion Service, and a good deal for veterinary work in this country. Odd jobs, but not uninteresting. With an effort, also, the Genetical Society seems to be on its feet again.

It is disappointing that we are taking so long to satisfy ourselves that incompetents are no good at winning wars. Perhaps the U.S. will take the lesson to heart in reasonable time.

Yours sincerely,
