2 February 1943

Dear Korenchevsky,

I should certainly come on Friday if it were at all possible, but I really should need to give longer notice in making such a change.

As to the number of patients in this first trial, you must get all you can; classify clinically so far as this is thought to be useful; and divide each class at random into four equal groups to receive different treatment. I imagine that there might be real difficulties at the Hospital if more than four groups were run simultaneously. The experimental comparisons, however, would be none the worse for further sub-division.

Yours sincerely,