February 3, 1942

Dear Professor Korenchevsky,

Thank you for your letter and enclosures on the Club for Research on Ageing. I should, as a matter of fact, be interested to keep in touch with the various researches you mention.

There is at present, I am afraid, no possibility of my own Laboratory carrying on specific research on similar problems. We keep a fair colony of mice, which I should be glad to supply, if wanted, but you probably have similar material already available.

Ultimately, problems of ageing are of great interest in human genetics, and the genetic aspect of the subject already appears in the variable age of incidence of many morbid conditions which my Laboratory has studied. In the post-war period, therefore, I should think it entirely suitable if work of interest to the Club were to be carried out in my Department.

Yours sincerely

2 papers returned: Report of the Committee upon The importance of future research into the biology of senescence and Research Project - By Dr E.J. Stieglitz.