Dear Dr. Körösy,

Thank you for your offprint and letter. I did not previously know of your father's attack on the recombination problem. It appears that our approaches are mathematically different though having a similar aim and one the importance of which had been sadly neglected by the American Drosophilists.

It is difficult to know what to do with your father's unpublished work. It may be that it could be safely published as a memorial volume in Hungary. Alternatively, if you felt sure that it would influence opinion in the West, I should try one of the American publishers which deal with genetical books (ours are too short of paper).

Yours sincerely,
