Dear Myslivec,

Thanks for your letter. I am enclosing herewith five offprints which I think you may not have seen; two of them are letters to Nature on recent work of the Department, two more are from Taylor's series on blood groups in England, the second being an examination of world data on M and N, while the fifth is one by Finney on Galton's family data for stature. It is strange that on so simple a measurement the available data should still be so unsatisfactory. I hope you will find these interesting.

Yours sincerely,
