Dear Fraser Roberts,

I am very glad to hear that you like the Tables. My impression is that one only gets full value out of such a book by keeping it handy and using it whenever possible, until one becomes thoroughly familiar with its contents and arrangement. Naturally it contains a great which one only seldom has occasion to use, and the great point of familiarity is that one gets to know about these less familiar tables.

I am returning the amended section herewith, and I think it is perfectly clear.

Yours sincerely,
