Dear Seal,

I have your letter of the 12th about the Royal Society Library, but I do not think the position is quite as you suppose. I have myself had considerable difficulty in obtaining books from this library, owing to the extent to which it has been made unavailable as a war measure.

I have here, belonging to the Department, or to the Departmental Library at University College, a number of useful books, largely tables, which I could let you borrow. Perhaps the best general source of books is the University Library, which, as you may know, will obtain books from other libraries, so far as they are available.

Yours sincerely,
