8 May 1943

My dear Taylor,

No, I have not had any occasion either to visit Tooting Bec Hospital or to communicate with the people there, since the time that I met them at the lunch given by Lord Nuffield. The gendelity of that occasion was obviously not of a kind that necessarily lasts, though it would be a pity not to give them a chance of meeting business if they are really still inclined to be helpful. They would be expecting to hear from you proposing a visit. Indirectly,
I rather that Korenchevsky's proposed experiment using vitamins and hormones with their patients has been having rather a stormy passage, so the general geniality may well have evaporated altogether.

Yours sincerely,