time. The ngargalula lives on its own booroo. A Jajjala man could not dream of a Nullagine ngargalula, but he can dream one from a booroo near Roeburne, and at Beagle Bay and Derby.

Various dialects

Bardee  Swan Point
Tchowee  Sunday Island
Nyeegane  Derby
Karrajarree  La Grange
Yowera  Loomungun
Warrwai  East of Jallala (Broome)
Jabberjabber  East of Beagle Bay
Jookan  Broome dialect
Ngoombal  Willie Creek
Nyoolnyool  Beagle Bay

There are not special ranjee in those places where women and children have been turned into stone, nor are they winnaith (forbidden, S.W. word) necessarily. The ranjee or ngargalula don't specially frequent any of these places.

Ranjee will be in beegardain ngooroo, or meerijool places and will not hurt home people (laana booroo). One time a man made two jamunungur and no one gave Leeber walle and Leeber was so angry he sent his own ranjee and the ranjee brought a lot of other womba (ranjee womba) and they brought their lanjee and mungoorl and all the womba who hadn't given eebala walle were frightened and thought the ranjee womba were real thammunjoonoo womba and they ran away. The ranjee went back to its booroo, which was a baaloo, and now no strange womba can go near that baaloo.

Leeber's ranjee is eebala to Billinge's ranjee, and Leeber's ranjee is Beedanoogaru. Before he goes into the mother he is ranjee, then/is ngargalula, and when he is born he is ngargalula, when he grows up he dreams his own ngargalula totems, or ranjee and by and by that ngargalula is his own walla again.

Lengogoone might be ngargalula booroo but they do not belong to Lengo, they would get jalnga from Lengogoone, and he would be called Lengo booroo, but they have no special or mysterious connection with Lengo.

If the father is jalnangooroo, the sons will all be jalnangooroo too. Sometimes the living will be named after the dead (after grandparents mostly), and several Billingees were at Broome, Carnot Bay and Beagle Bay, two Banaka Billingees at Carnot Bay, to Boorong Billingees at Beagle Bay and two Boorong Billingees near Broome.

The koojangooroo ngargalula are lammar nalma (fairhaired) and are only found along the seacoast. The Pindana ranjee (not ngargalula) are Nyimberr nalma (dark haired), the pindana ranjee are the same as the ngargalula, only the name is different and the colour.

Name of Wallawallong son when jammunungur is made, nguroobo

Southwest

The nganga wenee or jookarmig is not a totem although it is not eaten in the South. It is supposed to contain the spirit of our mother or sister. Would it be a sex totem? All the sons of a jalnangooroo are jalnga too (resembling the kajjoordoo of the Gascoyne) and there are jalnangooroo women, daughters of a jalnangooroo man.

Where is Billingees ngargalula now? That ngargalula cannot be his son's by and by because that would be himself, and if his ngargalula is at Beedaboogan, will his son's ngargalula be at Beedaboogan too? and his son's sons, (No, Billingees ngargalula merged into himself and is no more ngargalula.) There appears to be no "sex" totem. The line of descent runs through males, the women only carry the children.
Boogarree is the ordinary dream, but ranjee is a sort of "dream spirit." It lives in the thunder and lightning, and burns trees down. It is also in caves, in trees, springs and many other places. Walngeree - lightning
(Nai-a) ny-a, thunder

(1960) Information corrected later:
The ranjee is in the lightning (walngeree) and is rather a mischievous spirit. It cries in the dreams of men and women and enters into the bodies of the women and becomes a child. Leeberr dreamed of a little ranjee crying in a nyeerrwa and it followed him and went inside Jardajib and Billingee was born. The nyeerrwa is Billingee's boorooc (country) and jalnega and is meeroocoo (sacred; winaitch, Southwest) to anyone except Billingee and his father.

Mandeegur, whipsnake, not so quick in its movements as the woolgardain, yet more sulky than the woolgardain.
Ngoorl-ngoorl, black snake. Nyool-nyool
Balleet, balleedee, carpet snake
Banningboorooc, very large carpet snake

Yeegal barra nganjoo - mother losing her child (girl child)
Yeegal barra jeera, mother who loses her little boy.
Yarr'amoongool'anjee - mother who loses her boy, a big boy
Yarraboora boora, buried this morning

Billingee's ranjee (spirit) goes back to its nyeerrwa when Billingee dies. The spirit returns to its home. The ranjee cries and follows the man (in his dream, boogarree) and the man asks him what are, "Yangee nyillowel?" (What name?) and the ranjee says, "Kaimera or Paljeri," as the base may be. (Corrected later)
Beeramal, small branch
Ngajjoom boola
The mullet has four names for four different species.

Kallooroo (my tolun) (Naruk.)
Kar'karrbee'an (fish and lanje) (white breast, fin and tail)
Minnawin (found near mangroves)
Joordabarrijinnoo (about a foot in length)
Karrajoonoo (little ones)

Jallooroo, another species, like a mullet

Yooramurra (father's sister) and kumamda will name the children when they are little. Yooramurro gave Billingee his name.
Maggun ngooroo, another yooramurro gave him and Jeebagurdoo, another yooramurro gave him.
(When a young man is made maamboongana, his fathers or uncles give him another name.)

Jajjala booroo, belonging to Jajjala.
Koomballe = namesake
I would call my daughter-in-law goomalyoo, and she would call me yooramurro, and she would call my brother eebala. My brother would call her goomalijoo, koolanil and kooloo, all names given to my sons wife by my brother.
