A HISTORY OF LOCAL FOOD IN AUSTRALIA 1788-2015

Susan M. Chant

Thesis submitted for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy
Discipline of History
School of History and Politics
University of Adelaide

30th November 2015
Table of Contents

Abstract ....................................................................................................................................... 4
Thesis Declaration .......................................................................................................................... 5
Acknowledgements ....................................................................................................................... 6

Chapter 1: Introduction .................................................................................................................. 7

Popular Contemporary Conceptualisations of Local Food ............................................................. 7
Gaps in the Literature ..................................................................................................................... 13
Aims and Research Questions ....................................................................................................... 15
Structure ....................................................................................................................................... 15
Methodology ................................................................................................................................... 16
History of Commodities Approach ............................................................................................... 19

Chapter 2: The Concept of ‘Local Food’: A Review of Interrelated Concepts of ‘Local Food’ in the Global Context ..................................................................................................................... 24

Introduction ..................................................................................................................................... 24
Human Factors of Food Production ................................................................................................. 24
Geophysical Factors: Terroir, ‘Place’ and Typicality ........................................................................ 27
Country of Origin Labelling ............................................................................................................. 35
Marketing of Local Foods ................................................................................................................. 36
Definitions of Local Food .................................................................................................................. 38
Summary .......................................................................................................................................... 45

Chapter 3: A History of Local Food in Australia .......................................................................... 47

Introduction ..................................................................................................................................... 47
Historical Literature Review ........................................................................................................... 48
Local as Necessary ............................................................................................................................ 52
Local as Displaced by Imports ......................................................................................................... 61
Industrial Foods as Local .................................................................................................................. 62
Local as Constructed by Marketing ................................................................................................... 67
Summary .......................................................................................................................................... 90

Chapter 4: Case Studies: Local Food Products .......................................................................... 92

Introduction ..................................................................................................................................... 92
Case Study One: Sugar ..................................................................................................................... 92
Introduction and Literature Review ................................................................................................. 92
Sugar Consumption .......................................................................................................................... 95
Sugar Production ............................................................................................................................... 98
Abstract

This study investigates the history and evolution of the concept of ‘local food’ in Australia from the late 18th to the early 21st century. It does so by examining and explaining the meanings attached to and conveyed by local foods within their social-historical context. This is the first academic inquiry into the history of local foods in Australia and thus it makes an original contribution to the fields of Australian history, food history and marketing studies. The thesis argues that a preference for local food did exist in the post-1788 environment and supports this argument with the identification of various factors that were responsible for distinguishing local foods in Australia, including government intervention, industrialisation, marketing and the desire to develop a cultural identity separate from Britain, promoting a fierce independence reflected in the production of branded Australian-made products starting around the time of Federation. Using a history of commodities approach to link the production and consumption of local food products in four case studies, the main forces driving the connections to local foods are documented. The thesis contends that definitions of ‘local’ and understandings of the benefits associated with local foods have clearly shifted over time and the changes in meanings make it confusing for today’s consumers, meaning there are a number of fundamental uncertainties relating to how the distinctive characteristics of local foods may be determined, and how the special end qualities of such products may be understood or identified.
Thesis Declaration

I certify that this work contains no material which has been accepted for the award of any other degree or diploma in my name in any university or other tertiary institution and to the best of my knowledge and belief, contains no material previously published or written by another person, except where due reference has been made in the text. In addition, I certify that no part of this work will, in the future, be used in a submission in my name for any other degree or diploma in any university or other tertiary institution without the prior approval of the University of Adelaide and where applicable, any partner institution responsible for the joint award of this degree.

I give consent to this copy of my thesis, when deposited in the University Library, being made available for loan and photocopying, subject to the provisions of the Copyright Act 1968.

I also give permission for the digital version of my thesis to be made available on the web, via the University’s digital research repository, the Library Search and also through web search engines, unless permission has been granted by the University to restrict access for a period of time.

Susan M. Chant

30th November 2015
Acknowledgements

I am grateful for the generous support, assistance and guidance of my supervisor Professor Rachel Ankeny and my co-supervisors Dr Heather Bray and Dr Laura Prosperi at the University of Adelaide. I wish to also thank Margaret Hosking at the Barr Smith Library for her assistance. Lastly, I would like to acknowledge the editorial assistance of fellow PhD candidate Jessica Loyer.